To Whom It May Concern:

I have worked with Cheryl Wild, Ph. D., since October of 1999 when she volunteered to participate in and later lead the Quality Education Training Team through a thorough process review of its training needs and resources. In these roles Cheryl provided leadership, training, and mentoring to teachers, board members, school administrators, and business leaders.

While working with Cheryl I observed that she possesses great skill in guiding diverse groups through processes that allow for a full exploration of issues and potential resolutions. She was able to lead three major focus groups, with distinct interests and expectations, utilizing some creative problem solving strategies to help them come to consensus on major themes they all agreed needed to be resolved.

Cheryl is very skilled at bringing groups of individuals to synergetic levels so that significant improvement and growth can occur. She possesses many outstanding qualities that naturally bring people together, desiring to and then succeeding in, solving problems.

I have been a participant, with Cheryl, in the Quality Education Training Team and I have seen her lead this group to accomplish a training philosophy, a sequence of critical steps, a risk analysis, and a short and long-range plan for implementation. I strongly recommend her as an individual who is an extremely competent trainer and leader. She has proven to me that she can help all the stakeholders of public education to come to consensus on how to use a continuous improvement process that will bring schools to world class levels.

Sincerely yours,
